Dr. Dovidio’s research interests are in stereotyping, prejudice, and discrimination; social power and nonverbal communication; and altruism and helping. He shared the 1985 and 1998 Gordon Allport Intergroup Relations Prize for the best paper of the year on intergroup relations with Samuel L. Gaertner for their work on aversive racism and ways to reduce bias, and the 2001 Prize with Kerry Kawakami for their research on reducing spontaneous stereotyping. He received the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues’ Kurt Lewin Award in 2004 (with S.L. Gaertner) for his career contributions to the study of prejudice and discrimination.

This event is presented by the Office of the Dean, Mailman School of Public Health; the Mailman School of Public Health Diversity Committee and Sub-committee on Student Diversity; the Center for the Study of Social Inequalities and Health; the Columbia Center for Youth Violence Prevention; the Department of Epidemiology Diversity Committee; the New York-New Jersey Public Health Training Center; and the Mailman School of Public Health Student Government Association.
