The Center for the Study of Social Inequalities and Health & the Psychiatric Epidemiology Training (PET) Program at the Mailman School of Public Health are pleased to invite you to the special seminar

“How Easily Does a Social Difference Become a Status Distinction? Gender Matters” presented by

Cecilia Ridgeway, PhD
Lucie Stern Professor of Social Sciences
Department of Sociology at Stanford University

Professor Ridgeway’s work focuses on the role that social hierarchies in everyday social relations play in the larger processes of stratification and inequality in a society. She is currently writing a book tentatively titled Framed By Gender: How Gender Inequality Persists in the Modern World, which examines the role of interactional processes in preserving gender inequality despite major changes in the socioeconomic organization of society.

Date/Time: Thursday, Oct 18th 12:30 – 2:00 pm

Location: 722 West 168th Street 5th Floor, Room 532

For further information, contact Claire Espey at 212-342-0271 or cte2105@columbia.edu